I wholeheartedly agree with author of this quotation. Your native language and languages you learn can tell many things about your personality and your country. Language is certainly ~~the~~ roadmap of a culture. Let me take Russian as an example.

Russia has a really deep-going culture, that Russians were building through ages, because of this, Russian language is so poetic and hard to learn, but simple to use for natives.⁶⁹

There are also some moments in history of Russia, that changed Russians' mentality and their language. The Second World War made some letters in Russian sound less soft and more ~~tot~~ rude.

But Russian language is not the only one, that can tell many about person. English can tell as much information, as Russian.¹²¹

For example: native English speakers are more positive, than Russians. This is because of pronunciation of some English words and letters, that forces people to smile for a short time.

It is also very easy to learn as a foreign language because of its structure and grammar rules. That is why English become an official international language, and it is compulsory to learn in many countries all over the world.⁷⁵¹

These are the reasons, why I agree that much with author of this quotation. I also think that people should learn foreign languages, because it will make them better as personality. ~~for much more people, than without doing it.~~¹⁸⁹

„Language is the road map of a culture. It tells you where its people come from and where they are going“ - these are the words of Rita Mae Brown. As far as I understand, that means by learning a language you mark yourself on the culture map.

In my opinion, this expression is absolutely correct. Well or not so well, but a person always knows his native language, the language of a country where he or she was raised. Thus, he already is a part of culture. But usually people don't have just one mark on the culture map; there are some other. So, to better communicate with people of other nations, one has to learn their languages first. And while learning them, one thing is for certain: if you are ready to speak foreign languages, you are ready to understand the matching cultures.

As for an example, I ~~myself~~ am studying English myself. I am ready to speak it, and I am ready to be part of that culture! Besides that, I never forget my native language and my traditional culture.

These are my two marks, small dots on a big map. To conclude, I devoutly believe that in the future I will be able to mark myself much more - just as anyone else can.

"Language is a roadmap of a culture. It tells you where its people come from and where they are going"; is a quote by Rita Mae Brown.

Управление образования
администрации городского округа
Большой Камень

I strongly agree with it. Language is the sound of the culture. It has unique features and history for each culture.

Firstly, each language has various unique defining features. For example, let's look at the numbers. We are used to saying two digit numbers in the seemingly only logical way. For example, when we say "eighty-two", we imagine it as "eighty plus two". However, in French, they, instead, see it as "twenty times four plus two". Also, languages like Turkish have a different word depending on whether you ~~want to~~ want to say that you saw something yourself or if someone else saw it and told you. And there are tons of such small nuances.

Second, each language has its unique history. For example, did you know that languages of Alaskan native Americans are believed to be the same origin as the ~~the~~ Siberian people of Ket, who live by the Yenisei river? Each language has a unique story, ~~and~~ influenced by terrain, climate, traditions and much more.

In conclusion, I wanted to say that I ~~could~~ couldn't agree more with the quote, as each language has distinct features and unique history.

Rita Mae Brown Fairly said, "Language is the road map of a culture. It tells you where its people came from and where they are going". I agree with every single word of her quote.

To begin with, I am confident that the way a language represents its culture is the best way any culture could be represented at all. As an example let's look at the Russian language. First thing that comes to mind when someone says "Russian culture" is the Russian literature, which includes dozens of masterpieces, each of which shows unique beauty of the Russian language. Same ¹⁰⁰ goes for many other languages, just for some of them we'll find ^{them} expressed in folk songs rather than written on paper novels and tales.

I also think that Rita Mae Brown's quote could be applied to any single person, and not only to a group of people as big as an entire nation. How well a person is able to manage using their native language, as well as how many foreign languages they know and how well, perfectly shows their level of intelligence and cultural awareness. As the famous saying goes, "How many languages you know shows how many times you are a human being", which was many times repeated by chess grandmaster and polyglot Daniel Naroditsky. (220)

As a conclusion, I would like to state that besides the fact that a language perfectly represents its culture, learning any language ~~(including your native)~~ will make you a better citizen and human being.

Without any doubt, our world is large and there are many countries and nations whose languages differ from each other. Certainly, language is a map of a culture of people.

In my opinion, language can show many things about a person, for example, where he is from, traditions and customs of his country, for some reasons. Firstly, ~~Russian~~ ^{those} for instance Russian language has a lot of idioms and expressions that are associated only with this state. Secondly, there are many words that are used only in our language for telling about different countries. By the way, language is closely connected with history. For example, many French words came ^{into} ~~to our~~ speech thanks to Petr I, who wanted Russia ~~to~~ ^{all people} become like France, so he introduced new clothes for men and women and made them use foreign words in their communication. Moreover, ~~it is seen~~ ^{known} that our language ^{always} changes during our life. This way, the work "War and Peace" (Lermontov) differs very much from the story "Fathers and Children" and because they were written at different times and during different various historical events. As for me "Fathers and Children" is ~~more~~ easier for reading. However, both these books ^{are} great and interesting.

To conclude, not only our language but also our speech can tell much about us beginning with where we are from and ending with what jobs we have.

Once upon a time, ^{Punct} Rita Mae Brown said following: „Language is the road map of a culture. It tells you where its people come from and where they are going”. ^{str} I agree with this statement because of the following reasons.

First of all, if someone wants to study abroad or already ^{dep} does so, they will definitely learn the language of this ^{dep} specific country. ^{dep} Because once you start, you will ^{gr} pretty sure ^{dep} encounter the ^{dep} so-called „language barrier”. So, once you ^{style} know what languages this person will learn or had learned, you can almost clearly tell, ~~what this person~~ ¹⁰⁰ where this person wants to live, work or ^{dep} educate. Such happened to my uncle, who went studying in Japan but did not ¹⁰⁰ know ^{dep} Japanese. ¹⁰⁰ On around year three of studying, he was almost fluent in this language even though, he wasn't before.

Second, some people may know several languages from very young age, because they ~~parents~~ ¹⁰⁰ parenting figures have different nationalities and from very different places. And sometimes kids do this instinctively, there's a reason lots of people say that ~~the~~ ¹⁰⁰ six years is the best age to learn languages. This happened to my old friend, who had both Belarus and Russian roots, but he actually ¹⁰⁰ knew three languages: Russian, Belarus and English, because his granny was living in Texas. And knowing only the fact that he knew multiple languages from young age I had ¹⁰⁰ guessed who his parents were and where he was born!

~~But~~ ¹⁰⁰ In conclusion, it ¹⁰⁰ like to say that you should learn any languages, you interested in. Don't be afraid of doing so!

Rita Mae Brown once said: "Language is the road map of a ~~ent~~ culture. It tells you where it's people come from and where they are going". I'm going to express my view on it. ^{hey}

I agree with ~~h~~ the author. Every language has its own routes. If learn your language from the beginning, you can see how your country looked before. Also there are a lot of ~~words~~ new words, based on our present intereseests and situation in the world. It shows what is on our minds nowadays.

It is known that Chinese letters ¹⁰⁰ came from drawings. Ancient Chinese people used drawings as source of communications. So if you learn ancient chinese, you also learn chinese culture. You can see what they ate, who they met and in what conditions they lived. If we talk about nowadays, I can say that slangs show mind of modern people. Some of them are already claimed by the government and checked in official vocabularies. It means that next decades will also use these words, so they claim our ~~mindset~~ views on things and also ~~de~~ develope them and leave for following decades.

In conclusion I can say that language has information about our past, present and ¹⁰⁰ future. It is an important part of history and culture, and we need to know that.

Rita Mae Brown once said: "Language is the road map of culture. It tells you where its people come from and where they are going." Many people would agree with this statement. There isn't more important thing in culture than language.

There exists many languages around the world. Some of them are used by millions people. But also there are thousands of languages of small ethnic groups. These languages help to keep a history of many natives for ages. It seems to me that without language wouldn't understand each other. Language help us to make a connection with every nation around the world. It's a beautiful gift that you have an opportunity to learn any language you want. With knowledge of a new language you will start to see the world differently. You will get a reason to learn about other culture.

Language is that thing that describe ^{the} whole world and people in it. Have you ever think about how it would be difficult to learn cultures without learning about their ~~language~~ language? Language is everywhere in each culture, it helps to understand history and thoughts of ethnic groups. Our languages are definitions of our past, present and future, so we should defend them from death.

To sum up, it's hard to disagree with Rita Mae Brown. Her statement is the truest thing about our ~~world~~ world.
